Survey gathers reactions to protest

Faculty and staff should be receiving questionnaires this week about their participation in and reactions to events of the week of March 6-13, when protests of a hearing president closed the Gallaudet campus and resulted in what many are calling a civil rights victory for the deaf community.

The questionnaire was developed by Milo Garcia, a research technician with the Center for Studies in Education and Human Development and a special graduate student in linguistics, to collect information about the week, with input from a committee of three deaf and three hearing faculty and staff members.

Garcia's research began as a project in ethnography, a branch of anthropology dealing with a scientific description of individual cultures, but soon expanded into an attempt to gather as much data as possible about the attitudes of various groups in relation to events of the week.

The current questionnaire follows a longer one disseminated to faculty and staff during the past two weeks. Garcia said he decided to do the shorter questionnaire so that data could be more easily tabulated. He will look at both questionnaires in compiling data about the week. A separate questionnaire has also been sent to students.

Information resulting from the questionnaires will become part of an Ely Center exhibit being planned for May by the Deaf President Now Council. Garcia hopes by that time to have general results from the questionnaires available, as well as sample answers to questions most frequently answered on the longer version.

Eventually, information collected through the questionnaires will be available to interested people for their own analysis or interpretation, said Garcia. He explained that although he is collecting and analyzing the data, "our goal is not to interpret it."

Garcia is also interviewing individuals through the month of April about their reactions to the week.

Faculty and staff are asked to return their questionnaires by April 15 to KDES, Room 3600. For more information, or to schedule an interview, call x5206.

Barnes resigns; position and other vacancies filled

Gallaudet's Vice President for Administration and Business James Barnes has tendered his resignation as the University's chief business officer, effective May 1.

In a letter to the Gallaudet community dated March 31, Jordan said that Barnes had asked him to accept his resignation so Barnes could pursue outside interests.

Paul Kelly, a former assistant controller in the Accounting Department, has been named by Jordan to succeed Barnes. Kelly, who came to Gallaudet in 1981 as financial manager, is an attorney and a certified public accountant.

"Mr. Kelly's academic and professional credentials, his thorough knowledge of Gallaudet, and his high level of energy make him an ideal choice for this very important position," Jordan said.

Jordan has also announced several interim appointments to fill a number of administrative vacancies on campus: Dr. Ann Davidson as provost, Dr. Bette Martin as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and Dr. Michael Karchmer as dean of Graduate Studies and Research.

Davidson, who is dean of the School of Preparatory Studies and a member

'In Der Nacht' depicts persecution of deaf people in Nazi Germany

A special photo-narrative exhibit about the persecution of deaf people in Nazi Germany will soon be coming to Gallaudet.

"In Der Nacht: Visions of Deaf Survivors of Nazi Oppression," opens to the public on April 19 in Chapel Hall. The exhibit will be available for viewing daily for about a month before it moves to the Senate rotunda.

A major part of the exhibit is the story of Rose and Max Feld, who attended the Israelite School for the Deaf in Berlin during the 1930s. Max, who died in a concentration camp, kept a photo album, which is accompanied by Rose's narrative in the exhibit.

Woven throughout the photo album portion of the exhibit is a historical narrative, with archival documents and photographs, based on the work of Horst Biesold, a former high school teacher of deaf students in Germany.

Biesold, began his research on deaf victims of the Nazis and in the process uncovered a story of persecution that began years before the Holocaust. In "In Der Nacht," he documents the early eugenics movement in the United States and Europe, leading to the sterilization of at least 17,000 deaf Germans and the murder of about 150,000 disabled people—"useless eaters," they were called—1,600 of them deaf.

The exhibit also features the works of deaf artists David Bloch and Morris Broderson. Bloch, who escaped from the concentration camp at Dachau, has done woodcuts and oils filled with images of concentrations camps and the Holocaust. Broderson, whose work has been exhibited at the Whitney and Hirshhorn museums, has produced 18 works on Anne Frank, two created especially for "In Der Nacht."

Rose Feld, Biesold, and Bloch will be at Gallaudet for the opening of the exhibit, as well as Marla Petal and Michelle Baron, who produced the exhibit through the organization "All the People" for a preview at the XV World Games for the Deaf in Los Angeles.

Workshops open to the public will be held on April 19, 20, and 21 at both 4 and 7 p.m. in Chapel Hall.

On April 19 at 4 p.m., Biesold, Petal, and Baron will speak on "A Generation Once Removed: Personal Reflections on Coming to Understand Nazi Oppression Through Study." "Deaf and Hearing Survivors of the Holocaust" will be presented at 7 p.m.

Petal, Biesold, and Simon Carmel will lead a discussion on "Biography as Social History: Recording Deaf Experience." at 4 p.m. on April 20. The 7 p.m. discussion, "And Have You Thought About Your Children?" will be led by Petal and Biesold.

"Deaf Victims of Nazi Oppression—New Material in the Curriculum" will be presented April 21 at 4 p.m. by Petal, Baron, and Biesold. At 7 p.m., Biesold will speak on "The Jewish Deaf Community in Pre-War Germany."

"In Der Nacht" is being brought to Gallaudet by the College for Continuing Education, under the direction of its new regional center on campus, and the D.C. Jewish Community Center. Other sponsors include the National Congress of Jewish Deaf and the Washington Society of Jewish Deaf.

Visions of the Holocaust, such as this woodcut by deaf artist David Bloch, will be displayed in the "In Der Nacht" exhibit at Gallaudet.

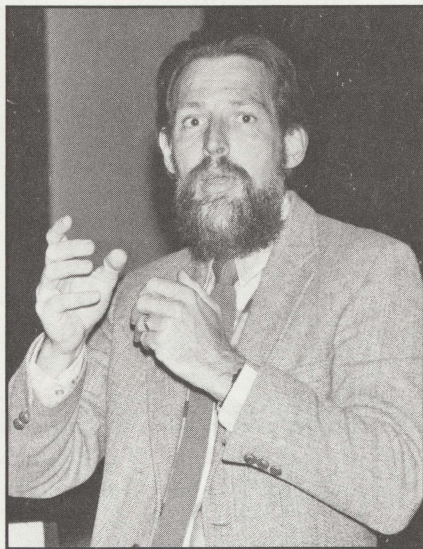

of the Council of Deans, replaces Dr. Catherine Ingold, who resigned as provost to accept the presidency of the American College in Paris, France. Davidson has indicated that she is not interested in being a candidate for provost on a permanent basis, Jordan said. Dr. Kenneth Epstein will manage the School of Preparatory Studies while Davidson is serving on Kendall Green.

Martin, who has been assistant to the dean in the College of Arts and Sciences, is filling in the vacancy created when Jordan became president. She has also decided not to apply for the position, Jordan said.

Karchmer assumes the responsibilities of former dean of Graduate Studies and Research Dr. Raymond Trybus, who was granted administrative leave effective April 1 until he begins his new job at the California School for Professional Psychology at San Diego in July.

A spokesman with the President's Office said that it is not yet known when final appointments for the positions will be made, but that it would be done before September.

Jordan also announced that Dr. Merwin Garretson has agreed to postpone his retirement and stay with the University for another year as Special Assistant to the President. He will continue as a member of Central Administration and will assume the role of overall coordinator of the Deaf Way Conference and Festival, scheduled to take place next July.

In his letter announcing Barnes' resignation, Jordan said Barnes "has demonstrated an exemplary commitment to the goals of Gallaudet University, and has contributed greatly toward the many efforts that have brought university status and national attention to Gallaudet."

Barnes joined Gallaudet in 1980 as a staff analyst for the Business Services Department. In 1984, he was appointed vice president after serving as the director of Administrative Services and the chief budget liaison to former President Jerry C. Lee while Dr. Lee was interim president.

During the almost three months between the time that Lee resigned and Jordan was appointed as president of Gallaudet, Barnes served on the four-member Central Administration Management Team that ran the University and was active in budget negotiations with Congress.

Tryouts held here for first U.S. Deaf Olympics team handball squad

Tryouts were held at Gallaudet March 17-20 for a U.S. team handball squad which will participate in the 1989 Deaf Olympics, slated for Jan. 7-17 in Christ Church, New Zealand.

This marks the first year that the United States will enter a team in this action-packed sport, according to Michael Cavanaugh, executive director of the United States Team Handball Federation.

Deaf people from around the country—a majority of them Gallaudet students or alumni—tried out for the seven lead and eight alternate positions.

Named to the team were Gallaudet students Kirk Anderson, Sonny Cabbage, Richard Jacobs, William Lange, Jason Ingraham, and Rocky Murray; alumni Daryl Wetzell, Scott O'Donnell, and Rusty Crace; and MSSD student Rich Kaufman.

Although it has been popular in other parts of the world since 1920—particularly in Europe, where it is second only to soccer in popularity—team handball has only existed in the United States since 1959.

Unlike the more familiar version of handball played in the United States on a small, four-cornered court, team handball is played on a basketball-sized indoor court.

The game combines the skills of running, jumping, catching, and throwing into a fast-moving game whose basic objective is to out-manuever the opposing team by passing a ball quickly from player to player and then throwing the ball past the defending goalie into a net to score.

The United States is fielding a team this year largely through the efforts of Ron Stern of the California State School for the Deaf in Fremont, Calif. Stern was the team handball commissioner at the 1985 World Games for the Deaf and saw the potential for Americans to enter the competition, Cavanaugh said.

In addition to the United States, countries scheduled to compete in the entire spectrum of events in the 1989 World Games are Sweden, Denmark, West Germany, Italy, and Norway.

Even though it is the United States' first endeavor at team handball in the World Games, Cavanaugh feels that the team has a good chance at winning, especially since the former gold medal holder in the sport, Yugoslavia, will not be participating.
